Opioid Fact Sheet: Understanding the Opioid Epidemic

What is an opioid?

Opioids are pain relieving drugs such as oxycodone, codeine, fentanyl, or morphine. When used as directed by a doctor, prescription opioids can safely control pain. Illegal opioids include drugs like heroin or synthetic fentanyl.

How do opioids work?

Opioids work by acting on certain receptors in the brain to help block pain. They also produce a chemical in your brain called dopamine, which can lead to feelings of calmness and pleasure. This increase in dopamine can cause people to seek those feelings of pleasure over and over. Many people may begin abusing prescription opioids without even realizing it.

Opioids can be habit forming and taking too much over a long period of time can lead to both tolerance (needing more of a substance over time) and dependence (needing the substance to avoid withdrawal).

Possible signs of addiction:

Physical Signs: noticeable elation or euphoria, sedation or drowsiness, confusion, very small or “pin point” pupils

Behavioral Signs: shifting or dramatically changing moods, social withdrawal or isolation, financial problems, anxiety

What is an opioid overdose?

An overdose is when a person has taken too much of an opioid for their body to handle. Their breathing and heart rate slows, leading to unconsciousness. If medical attention is not received, in most cases, it can be fatal.

Signs of Overdose: unconsciousness or inability to speak; pale and/or clammy skin; limp body; slow or stopped breathing; slow or stopped heartbeat; blue or purple hue to fingernails; vomiting or gurgling noises.

Opioid overdose requires immediate medical attention!

IF YOU SUSPECT SOMEONE IS IN ACTIVE OVERDOSE,
CALL 911 IMMEDIATELY AND ADMINISTER
NALOXONE/NARCAN IF POSSIBLE

What is Naloxone?

Naloxone, or known by its brand name Narcan, is an immediate antidote to someone in active opioid overdose. If administered during active opioid overdose, it can save a life.

Anyone can administer Naloxone and it is encouraged that you keep it on hand if your loved one is using any type of opioid. Narcan is available at most pharmacies without a prescription and costs between $30-$60. You can also request Narcan for free through the North Carolina Harm Reduction Coalition. <http://www.nchrc.org/programs-and-services/getting-naloxone-from-nchrc>

I think my loved one may be addicted. How can I help them?

The first step is often the most difficult one. If you have a loved one that you believe is having difficulty with opioid use, let them know that above all you love and support them.
